INSTITUTES OF ADVANCED STUDIES

The two institutes for postgraduate study and research of the University, the Institute of Social Studies and the Humanities and the Institute of Science and Technology, were formally established when the respective Advisory Committees met for the first time on March 6, 1965.

The Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Cheh-Ming Li, who is concurrently the Director of the Institute of Social Studies and the Humanities, made the announcement to a joint meeting of the two advisory committees.

Dr. C.T. Yung is concurrently the Director of the Institute of Science and Technology.

The initial organization of the two Institutes is as follows:

On Functions A University Institute performs two functions: to promote and encourage faculty research and to conduct postgraduate training. The faculty research at the Institute does not replace the kind of research supported by the regular College budget for teaching purposes.
sideration for some time. In any case, they must be realistic in terms of the available resources.

(b) The individual faculty research may develop into a group or inter-disciplinary effort when substantial outside financial support warrants the establishment of a research unit, a centre or an independent institute. This does not rule out the establishment of a centre without outside assistance.

(c) Postgraduate training may begin soon after the establishment of the Institute.

When a research unit is established, the chief of the unit will be appointed by the Vice-Chancellor at the recommendation of the Director.

When a research unit is established, it may recommend through the Director to the Vice-Chancellor to establish an Advisory Board which includes membership outside the University.

An Institute may conduct faculty discussions and inter-disciplinary seminars and university lectures, and arrange for the publication of journals and monographs.

Each institute is under the administration of a Director who is appointed by the University Council at the recommendation of the Vice-Chancellor.

After consultation with his Advisory Committee, the Director prepares an annual budget of the Institute for the consideration of the Senate.

The Director recommends, in the form of a priority list to the Vice-Chancellor, research grants to various faculty members who have applied for research assistance. Final decision will be made by the Vice-Chancellor, after consultation with the Senate Committee on Research.

With the approval of the Vice-Chancellor, the Director may seek outside financial support for certain research projects which in his view should be developed.

The Director, after consultation with the Advisory Committee of the Institute, may recommend to the Chairman of the Senate all matters relating to the development of research and publication in his institute, the time of initiating postgraduate training, and the establishment of a research unit in the institute. The Chairman of the Senate will refer these matters to the Senate Committee on Research for a decision.

On the Advisory Committee
At the recommendation of the Chairman of the Senate, an Advisory Committee will be appointed by the Senate for each Institute to give advice to the Director on policy matters and the annual budget of the Institute. The Director shall be chairman of the Committee.

The membership of the Committee falls into two categories:

(a) The Directors of University Studies in the subject fields that come under the purview of the Institute.

(b) Those faculty members who have shown strong interests and ability in the subject field for which there is no University Board of Studies or Director of University Studies, but which the Institute would like to promote.

Each member of the Committee is charged with the responsibility of keeping in close contact with various faculty members in the University who have research interests in the subject field he represents, and encouraging them to present their research projects to the Director.

Each member is requested to give assistance to the Director of the Institute in seeking outside financial support of the research projects in his own field of study and to make recommendations to the Director on all matters relating to the development of research and publication in his field, the timing of initiating postgraduate training and the establishment of a research unit.

The present membership of the Advisory Committee for the Institute of Science and Technology are:

Chairman — Dr. C.T. Yang
Biology — Professor Li Hui-lin
Basic Chemistry — Dr. Daniel Y. Chang
Industrial Chemistry — Dr. Chang Hsien Mou
Physics — Professor Hsu Bay-sung
Electronics — Mr. Patrick S.K. Fang
Mathematics and Statistics — Dr. S.T. Tsou

PRODUCTIVITY COUNCIL

At the recommendation of the Vice-Chancellor, Prof. Chou Kai-ren of Economics has been appointed by the Hong Kong Government to be a member of the Provisional Productivity Council. The Chairman of the Council is the Hon. D.R. Holmes, Director of Commerce and Industry.

The purpose of the Council is "to consider the development of programmes designed to increase productivity in industry and services in Hong Kong at the level of the individual undertaking; to formulate policy in connection with the promotion of such programmes generally and in particular concerning the functions of the productivity centre and its financing, including the preparation of an annual budget; to coordinate activities of the centre and other institutions engaged in productivity promotion, and to advise on the amount and disbursement of subventions to such institutions; to advise Government on general measures designed to improve productivity at the enterprise level."

GIFT FROM JAPAN

An official ceremony was held on March 8 at the Central Office of the University where the Japanese Consul-General in Hong Kong, Mr. Kinya Niiseki, presented a collection of books to the libraries of the Foundation Colleges.

Dr. Choh-Ming Li, the Vice-Chancellor, accepted the gift in the presence of the Presidents of the three Foundation Colleges.

The collection of books, totaling 487 volumes, was one of a series of gifts given by the Japanese Government to the new University.

In July last year, the Japanese Government invited a delegation from the University, led by Dr. Li, to visit universities and institutes in Japan. In the same year a two-year scholarship was given to a tutor of the University to study at the University of Kyoto.

INSTITUTES OF ADVANCED STUDIES

The two institutes for postgraduate study and research of the University, the Institute of Social Studies and the Humanities and the Institute of Science and Technology, were formally established when the respective Advisory Committees met for the first time on March 6, 1965.

The Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Choh-Ming Li, who is concurrently the Director of the Institute of Social Studies and the Humanities, made the announcement to a joint meeting of the two advisory committees.

Dr. C.T. Yung is concurrently the Director of the Institute of Science and Technology.

The initial organization of the two Institutes is as follows:

On Functions A University Institute performs two functions: to promote and encourage faculty research and to conduct postgraduate training. The faculty research at the Institute does not replace the kind of research supported by the regular College budget for teaching purposes.
