Besides the first in the Journalism Lecture Series, which was held on February 24 at New Asia College, the University and Colleges also sponsored a number of interesting talks of varied nature in the months of January and February by the following visitors:

Prof. Hu Ch'ang-tu

A series of public lectures sponsored by the School of Education of The Chinese University of Hong Kong were held on January 26, 27, 28 at the Auditorium of New Asia College, Farm Road, Kowloon, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Dr. Hu Ch'ang-tu, Professor of Education, Teachers College, Columbia University. The titles of the lectures were as follows: "Recent Trends in Education: A Comparative View" (January 26); "The Study of Comparative Education: An Appraisal" (January 27); "Education in China: the Two Phases" (January 28).

Professor Hu is the author of two books: "China: Its People, Its Society, Its Culture" and "Chinese Education Under Communism." He has also contributed articles to such noted journals as the Far Eastern Quarterly, Comparative Education Review, The China Quarterly (London), and The World Forum.

Professor Hu delivered his lectures in English with summaries in Chinese.

Dr. Eberhard Jaeckel

A public lecture on "Eisenmarch's Role in European History" was sponsored by The Chinese University of Hong Kong on Friday, February 18, 1966 at 7:00 p.m. at the School of Education, Liu Chong Hing Building, 593-601 Nathan Road, Kowloon.

The speaker was Dr. Eberhard Jaeckel, Lecturer of Modern History, University of Kiel. Dr. Jaeckel visited Hong Kong at the invitation of the Goethe Institute.

Dr. Jaeckel is a well-known scholar of modern history. A graduate of the University of Freiburg, he further studied at the State University of Florida and the University of Paris. He taught at several educational institutions in Germany and is a member of several research centres. From 1962 to 1963, he was a guest reader at the Punjab University in Chandigarh.

Dr. Jaeckel was also invited by New Asia College to deliver a talk to the students.

Dr. Dang Dinh Ang

Dr. Dang Dinh Ang, Associate Professor of Mathematics at the University of Saigon, gave a seminar on "Some Fixed Point Theorems and Their Application" to students of The Chinese University and the University of Hong Kong on February 25, 1966 at United College.

Dr. Ang was Visiting Senior Research Fellow at the California Institute of Technology from 1962 to 1963, Consultant in Applied Mathematics at the Institute of Geophysics at Los Angeles, University of California, from 1964 to 1965. His field of research is functional analysis and applications.

Dr. Lin Yu-tang

Dr. Lin Yu-tang, the celebrated Chinese author, was invited by the Departments of Extra-Mural Studies of the two Universities to give two public talks, one in Chinese on February 28, the other in English on March 8.

Dr. Lin was also invited by New Asia College to address its students at the commencement of the College Spring Term on February 21. Over seven hundred staff members and students attended.

After introduction by Dr. T.C. Ou, President of New Asia College, Dr. Lin delivered an address on "The Virtues of Learning". He cited examples of the ancients to show that the ultimate purpose of learning is not to get a certificate or any worldly honour, although they are undeniably useful in the present day, but to develop one's thinking faculty.

"Dr. Lin's talk, delivered in an unpretentious, simple style, but scintillated with jokes and humour, was warmly applauded."

Dr. Choh-Ming Li

The lecture on Journalism was held on February 24 at New Asia College. Dr. Choh-Ming Li, the Vice-Chancellor, presided at the lecture and introduced Mr. Shaplen. Dr. Li remarked that the establishment of a Department of Journalism and Mass Communications in a university is unprecedented in Hong Kong and unknown in many other parts of Asia. He pointed out that the lecturers are all well-known newspapermen either from abroad or living in Hong Kong. The fact that they are willing to lecture in the University in spite of their own extremely heavy schedules is a measure of the international and local support the University receives in this new endeavour, Dr. Li concluded.

Dr. Robert Edward Mitchell

Dr. Robert Edward Mitchell of the University of California, Berkeley, has joined the Chinese University to establish and direct the new Survey Research Centre. Dr. Mitchell's training and research experience indicate that he is no stranger either to the Chinese society or to the academic circle in Hong Kong. He received his first degree from the University of Michigan, where he specialized in Oriental civilizations. He received his Ph.D. from the China Area Programs at Harvard, and received a doctorate in Sociology from Columbia in 1962. While at Columbia, he served as a project director at the University's Bureau of Applied Social Research and at the same time taught in the Department of Sociology.

From 1962 to February this year, Dr. Mitchell was with the Survey Research Centre of the University of California, Berkeley. During this time he initiated a vast programme of research projects and studies related to comparative international studies. These responsibilities led him to many parts of the world, including two trips through Asia, one through Latin America, and several to Europe. In the course of establishing Berkeley's International Data Library and Reference Service, an archive of existing social science data in the form of IBM cards, Dr. Mitchell served as the first Executive Secretary of the Council of Social Science Data Archives, an American association composed of social science research centres from some twenty leading American universities. He has also been active in research and training programmes for international comparative social science studies supported by the International Social Science Council and UNESCO.

Dr. Mitchell's research and writings cover a wide range of topics, and he has some two dozen publications and reports on such topics as survey research methodology in the developing countries, comparative study of social science research agencies in Asia and Latin America, economic and social barriers to the effective performance of modern occupational tasks in the developing countries, methodological critiques of theories of status crystallization, occupational, organizational, and career elements of the American business and professional dilemmas in voting behaviour in national and local elections, and the use of frequency content analysis procedures for explanatory studies. These articles have appeared in the International Social Science Journal, The American Behavioral Scientist, Social Problems, Social Science Information, The American Journal of Sociology, Public Opinion Quarterly, The Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion, and The Review of Religious Research.

With these varied research interests, together with the service orientation of the University's new Survey Research Centre, Dr. Mitchell expects to work closely with the social scientists of the University and the local community. He will be especially helpful in advising on matters of research design, arranging for the collection of interview and questionnaire data, preparing these materials for machine processing, processing and analyzing materials, and preparing research reports. The new Centre can provide service and educational programmes to help perform these tasks. Several IBM data-processing machines have already been ordered for use by the University. His office is at the 3rd floor of the On Lee Building, 545 Nathan Road, Kowloon.

Accompanying Dr. Mitchell are his wife, who has a Master's degree in Anthropology, and three young children. The family has taken up residence at Kowloon Tong.
